Fall Harvest Has Begun!

October 1st marked the beginning of our 2008 harvest season. We started things off by bring in our 2 year old koi. We are very excited about the variety and quality of these koi. These koi came out averaging 10-14". Along with many other varieties, these highly requested will be available—Asagi, Shusui, Kawarigoi, Doitsu Kin Showa, Gin Rin Hariwake, Doitsu Yamatonishiki, Kikusui, Ochiba, Chagoi, Gin Rin Ochiba and Sarigoi. These koi will be quarantined and available for purchase during our main event weekend and thru our online catalog. With their popularity they won't last long and with our winter keeping option you won't have to wait until spring to purchase your koi. Our tosai will be harvest, following the Main Event Harvest, the beginning of November. With the vast number of tosai to be harvest, sorted and quarantined, these koi will be available for sale in spring 2009. As always, if you are looking for a special koi please contact us and we will work with you to find the koi just right for you. Watch our website over the next few weeks as our harvest koi will be display thru our online catalog.

Koi in Mud

In June, you will be able to start viewing the koi selected to go to the mud ponds online at www.qualitykoi.com. The photo processing takes us a little time so keep an eye on the site for new uploads.

The koi can be viewed thru our catalog stating that they are in mud ponds or thru the "Mud Pond" page under the Nisei Koi Farm link.

Manic Monday!

Every year that we make tosai which have vast spread in size. Our normal routine is to put 6"+ koi back into the mud ponds in spring to grow for another season. The smaller tosai are grown inside for the entire season or are moved out to the mud ponds in late summer. By the end of their 2nd summer, grown indoor or out, they are all around 8-12".

These koi are normally mature enough to sex acutely and during our prep for the fall harvest we select all the best females in each of the size ranges and offer them in application to our harvest attendees on MANIC MONDAY.

In the morning on Monday we will harvest the mud pond that held last years Manic Monday koi thru the summer. We will put them on view for everyone and go over the attributes of each koi. Finally, Mat will pick what he considers in the best overall koi. The winner of 07' Manic Monday will receive free entire into this years Manic Monday contest and free keeping for one more year of the winning koi.

After lunch this years contest will begin. A number of these high class koi will be put in a bowl and by selection of number each participate will take turns picking their koi. The selection of the koi must be made with no assistance from a Quality Koi staff member.

The entry is $500 + $100* optional insurance. The entry fee includes keep of the koi until next fall's Main Event Harvest.

Koi will be re-sexed in the spring prior to going to the mud ponds and any males will be offered a female replacement.
